

FOREWORD

Department of Psychology, IIUM in collaboration with the Behavioral Science Research Institute, Srinakharinwirot University, Thailand has been organizing the International Research Colloquium since 2004. This has become a good ground for members of staff and postgraduate students of both institutions to present their research work.

As what has been practiced before, some papers presented in this colloquium are compiled and published. I am pleased to note that the papers presented in the third international research colloquium held at the Department of Psychology, IIUM, in May 2006 is published in this volume. It contains more research works than the previous volume.

It is hoped that this annual event of both institutions will continue to flourish in future.
