

International Journal of Behavioral Science

Aims and Scope

- ✚ The Behavioral Science Research Institute (BSRI), Srinakharinwirot University, Bangkok, Thailand, has published the International Journal of Behavioral Science (IJBS) since 2006.
- ✚ The aim of this journal is to endow a platform for original research works and articles that seek explanations for the diverse behavioral science issues at various levels- individual, groups, organizational, and cultural levels.
- ✚ The IJBS encourages the authors to publish academic work which shows the integration of the interdisciplinary perspective of behavioral sciences, applying knowledge from various disciplines such as psychology, sociology, health, management and others to address contemporary issues.
- ✚ The authors may have conducted researches focused on important local issues but they should be able to demonstrate the implications of their findings for the larger international community working in the behavioral sciences. New contributions to behavioral science knowledge and a strong research methodology must be reflected in the submissions.
